

MEDIA LAWYERS ASSOCIATION COUNSEL INFORMATION

Floyd Ouma Okello is a lawyer by profession and a certified mediator with a growing influence in the field of law and dispute resolution. He currently serves as the Chair of the Training Committee at the Media Lawyers Association of Kenya (MLAK), where he leads initiatives aimed at strengthening professional development and capacity-building for lawyers in the media and communication space.

In addition to his role at MLAK, Floyd serves as an Assistant Lawyer at Oduor IA & Company Advocates, where he actively contributes to client representation, legal research, and advisory services. He is also part of the legal team working with the Kenya Union of Journalists (KUJ), where he supports efforts to safeguard media freedom, protect journalists' rights, and promote access to justice.

His professional interests lie in contract law and constitutional law, areas where he continues to build expertise and contribute meaningfully to both litigation and policy discussions. As a certified mediator, Floyd is equally committed to alternative dispute resolution, using mediation as a tool to foster fairness, efficiency, and peaceful settlement of conflicts.
